Genesis Graduate Internship 2024/2025 For Young Professionals

Description

Genesis is committed to fostering growth by annually recruiting a cohort of young, talented individuals. These candidates, whether newly graduated or early in their professional journeys, are selected for their potential to contribute to meaningful change and development. Successful applicants join as young professionals, beginning their careers as analysts in a specialized practice area, enhancing their skills to become world-class consultants.

The internship program is based in Johannesburg and offers participants the opportunity to develop their expertise within one of Genesis's practice areas, which include the Centre of Digital Excellence, Climate Finance and Economics, Competition and Regulatory Economics, Evaluation for Development, Financial Services Strategy, Health, Human Development, and Shared Value and Impact. The program promises a challenging learning environment, fostering career growth through mentoring, structured training, and a clear career progression path.

Responsibilities

Interns collaborate with Genesis colleagues in teams to assist clients in unlocking value. Responsibilities include:

- Conducting rigorous data analysis using both conceptual and quantitative methods.
- Applying specialized logic and problem-solving skills.
- Preparing comprehensive and logically structured documentation.
- Performing project-related research and data sourcing.
- Cleaning and tailoring data for project-specific needs.
- Ensuring data accuracy through meticulous vetting.
- Engaging in client interactions and negotiations.
- Contributing to the development of intellectual capacity and property.

Qualifications

Candidates should possess postgraduate degrees in disciplines such as Economics, Development Studies, International Development, Public Policy, Policy Evaluation, Public Health (Epidemiology), Health Economics, Behavioral Science, PPE, Sustainability, Climate Change, Global Studies, or Program Evaluation. A Master's degree in any of these fields is advantageous.

Job Benefits

Participants benefit from a steep learning curve, with opportunities for professional development through on-the-job training, feedback, mentoring, structured coaching, and a clear career ladder. Genesis invests in the growth of its interns, providing a supportive environment for building a successful career.

How To Apply?

Interested candidates should submit their applications, including academic credentials, to Genesis. Detailed application procedures and deadlines will be provided in the official program announcement. Applicants must ensure their
